PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Pellow citizens of the Senate and Honse of Rep-

To express gratitude to God, in the name of the people, for the preservation of the United States, is my first duty in addressing you. Our thoughts next revert to the death of the late President by an art of parricidal treason. The grief of the nation is still tresh; it finds some solace in the consideration that he lived to enjoy the highest proof of its confidence, by entering on the renewed term of the Chief Magistracy, to which he had been elected; that he brought the civil war substantially to a close; that his loss was deplored in all parts of the Union; and that foreign nations have rendered justice to his members in the first civil was deplored in all parts of the Union; and that foreign nations have rendered justice to his members. their necessary aid; it is, to state with trankness the principles which guide my comfuct, and their application to the present state of affins, well aware that the efficiency of my labors will, in a great measure, depend on your and their undivided approbation.

The Union of the United States of America was intended by its authors to last as long as the States themselves shall last. "The Union shall be perpetual," are the last words of the Confederation. "To form a MORE PERFECT UNION," by an ordinance of the people of the United States, is the declared purpose of the Constitution. The hand of Divine Providence was never more plainly visible in the allairs of men than in the Iraning and the adopting of that instrument. It is, beyond comparison, the greatest event in American history; and indeed is it not, of all events in modern times, the most pregnant with consequences for every people of the earth? The members of the Convention which prepared it brought to their work the experience of the Confederation, of their several States, and of other Republican Governments, old and new, but they needed and they obtained a wisdom su perior to experience. And when, for its validary, it required the approval of a people that occupied a large part of a continent and acted separately in many distinct conventions, what is more wonderful than that, after earnest contention and long discussion, all feelings and all opinions were ultimately drawn in one way to its support?

The Constitution to which life was thus imparted contains within itself ample resources for its own preservation. It has power to enforce laws, punish treason, and insure domestic tran-In case of the usurpation of the Government of a State by one man, or an oligarchy, it becomes a doty of the United States to make

It is not strange that the framers of the Constitution, which had no model in the past, should not have fully comprehended the excellence of their own work. Fresh from a struggle against arbitrary power, many patriots suffered from harassing fears of an absorption of the State Government by the General Government, and many from a dread that the States would break away from their orbits. But the very greatness of our country should allay the apprehension of encrowdaments by the General Government. I bound the States suffering from the effects of a civil war. Resistance to the General Gov-Our ernment appeared to have exhausted itself. United States had recovered possession of their form and arsenals, and their armies were in the occupation of every State which had attempted to seede. Now, military governments, established for an foreign nations have rendered justice to his memory. His removal cast upon me a heavier weight of cares than ever devolved upon any one of his predecessors. To fulfill my trust I need the support and confidence of all who are associated with me in the various departments of Government, and the support and confidence of the propher is but one way in which I can hope to gain their necessary aid; it is, to state with trankness pease. Peaceful emigration to and from that portion of the country is one of the lest means that can be thought of for the restoration of harmony; and that emigration would have been prevented; for what emigrant from abount, what is the property of the p industrions citizen at home, would place himself willingly under military rule? The chief persons who would have followed in the train of the army would have been descolents on the General Government, or men who expected profit from the miseries of their erring feilow-citizens. The powers of patronage and rule which would have been exercised, under the President, over a vast, and populous, and naturally wealthy region, are greater than, unless under extreme necessity, I should be willing to intrust to any one man; they are such as, for myself, I could never, unless on occasions of great emergency, consent to exercise. The willful use of such provers, if continued through a period of years, would have endangered the purity of the general administration and the liberties of the States which remained loval.

Besides, the policy of military rule over a con quered territory would have implied that the States whose inhabitants may have taken part in the rebellion had, by the act of those inhabitants. ceised to exist. But the true theory is, that all pretended acts of secession were from the beginning, null and void. The States cannot commit treason, nor screen the individual citizens who may have committed treason, any in ac than they can make valid treaties or engage in lawful com-merce with any toreign power. The States at-tempting to second placed themselves in a condition where their vitalay was impaired, but not extinguished-their functions susp nded, but not attempting to make the freedmen electors by the proclamation of the Executive, I took for my counsel the Constitution itself, the interpretations of that instrument by its authors and their can temporaries, and recent legislation by Congress When, at the first movement towards independence, the Congress of the United States instructed the several States to institute governments of their own, they left each State to decide for itself the conditions for the enjoyment of the elective Franchise. During the period of the Confederacy, there cuntinued to exist a very great diversity in the qualifications of electors in the several States; and even within a State a distinction of qualifications prevailed with regard to the officers who were to be chosen. The Constitution of the United States recognizes these diversities, when it enjoins that, in the cludge of members of the House of Representatives of the United States, where the electors in each State shall have the qualharbored the purpose-vertainly never avowed the purpose-of disregarding it; and in the acts of Congress during that period, nothing can be found which, during the continuance of hostilities, much less after their close, would have sanction ed any departure by the Executive from a policy which has so uniformly obtained. Mo cover, a concession of the elective franchise to the freedmen, by act of the President of the United States, must have been extended to all colored men, wherever found, and so must have established a change of suffrage in the Northern, Middle, and Western States, not less than in the Southern and Southwestern. Such an act would have created a new class of voters, and would have been an assumption of power by the President whi or nothing in the Constition or laws of the United would have warranted.

On the other hand, every danger of conflict is avoided when the settlement of the ques tion is referred to the several States. They can er it is to be adopted at once and absolutely, continuously gradually and with conditions. In my judgment, the freeduce, if they show patience and manly virtues, will somer obtain a part clear ticn in the elective tranchise, through the States than through the General Government, even it it had power to intervene. When the turn tool emotions that have been raifed by the sudden-1 (83 of the social change shall have subsided, it may prove that they will receive the kindless usage from some of those on whom they have heretofore most closely depended.

But while I have no doubt that now, after the close of the war, it is not competent for the General Government to extend the elective from chise in the several States, it is equally clear that good faith requires the security of the freedmen will. The experiment involves us in no incon-sistency; let us, then, go on and make that ix periment in good faith, and not be too easily disheartened. House of Representatives of the United States, "the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numer, one branch of the State Legislature." After the one branch of the Constitution, it remained, as formation of the Constitution, it remained, as before, the uniform usage for each State to enlarge the body of its electors, according to its easily operation of the Homestead Act, under own judgment; and, under this system, one State provisions of which 1,140,533 acres of the public lunds were entered during the last liscal publ or something very near it, is the general rule. So fixed was this reservation of power in the habits of the people, and so unquestioned has been the interpretation of the Constitution, that during the civil war the late President never harbored the purpose—vertainly never avoid the lands entered under this Act, and that have the numbers of per cent, will be made by settlers, who may thus at any time acquire till before the expi ation of the period at which it would otherwise vest. The homestead policy was established only after long and earnest resistance; experience proves its wisdom. The lands, in the hands of industrious settlers, whose Thor creates wealth and contrib ntes to the poblic resources, are worth more to the United States than if they had been reserv-

UNDERWRITERS' POLICY OF INSTRANCE, IS ISSUED BY JAMES M. WITHROW, Agont, Frankfort, Ky. JAMES M. WITHROW, Agont, Frankfort, Ky.

TPONE POLICY of Insurance, issued by FOUR COMPANES, which is made to meet the necessities of the business community, by securing, with dispatch, large lines of Insurance with reliable Companies, upon UNIFORM, PLAIN, AND SIMPLE CONDITIONS, thereby obviating the necessity of applying to various separate Offices for Insurances to the amount they are severally nible to accept; and of holding numerous separate Policies, the conditions and written pertions of which rarely agree, rendering it difficult for the assured to become tamiliar with, and harmonize their various conflicting conditions.

By the conditions of the UNDERWEITERS 'POLICY' but ONE SET OF PAPERS is required to prove a loss to the several Companies insuring under it, thereby making the adjustment simple and expeditions.

The Cash Assets of each Company issuing the Underwriters' Policy of Insurance exceed HALF A MILLION OF DOLLARS, making a security in the THREE MILLION DOLLARS.
